It is about time the government needs to stop this witch hunt. Microsoft innovations have allowed the common man to enter the realm of technology by providing user friendly software and operating systems. We are a country which allows competition among the industries, and if you have a good product, your company will flourish. Should we condemn Chrysler for selling more cars than Chevrolet and call them a monopoly? If the other software companies were so great, they would be another Apple or Microsoft.

Perhaps in our down economy, the Justice Department would like Microsoft to become another Enron.
